

Succession Planning Process

The succession planning process has three steps:

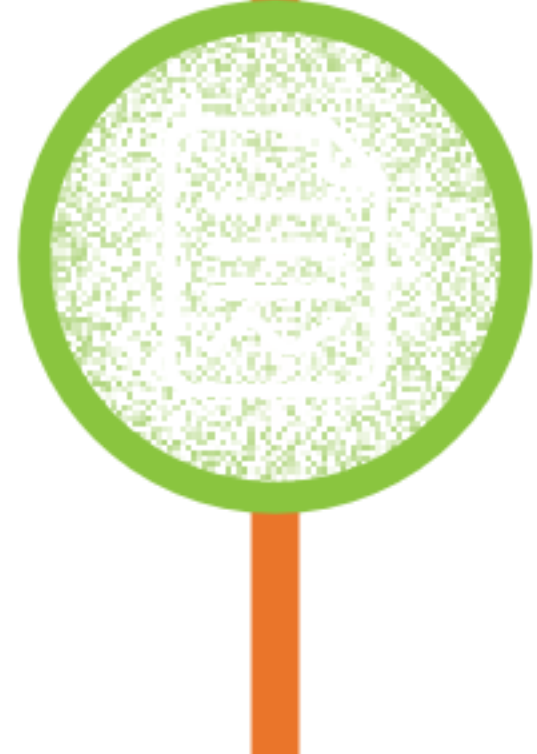

1. Identify Critical Positions

a. Identify the major challenges that your business may encounter in the next five years.

b. Identify the crucial positions that will be required for business continuity.

c. Determine the critical success factors and competencies necessary to achieve the business objectives.

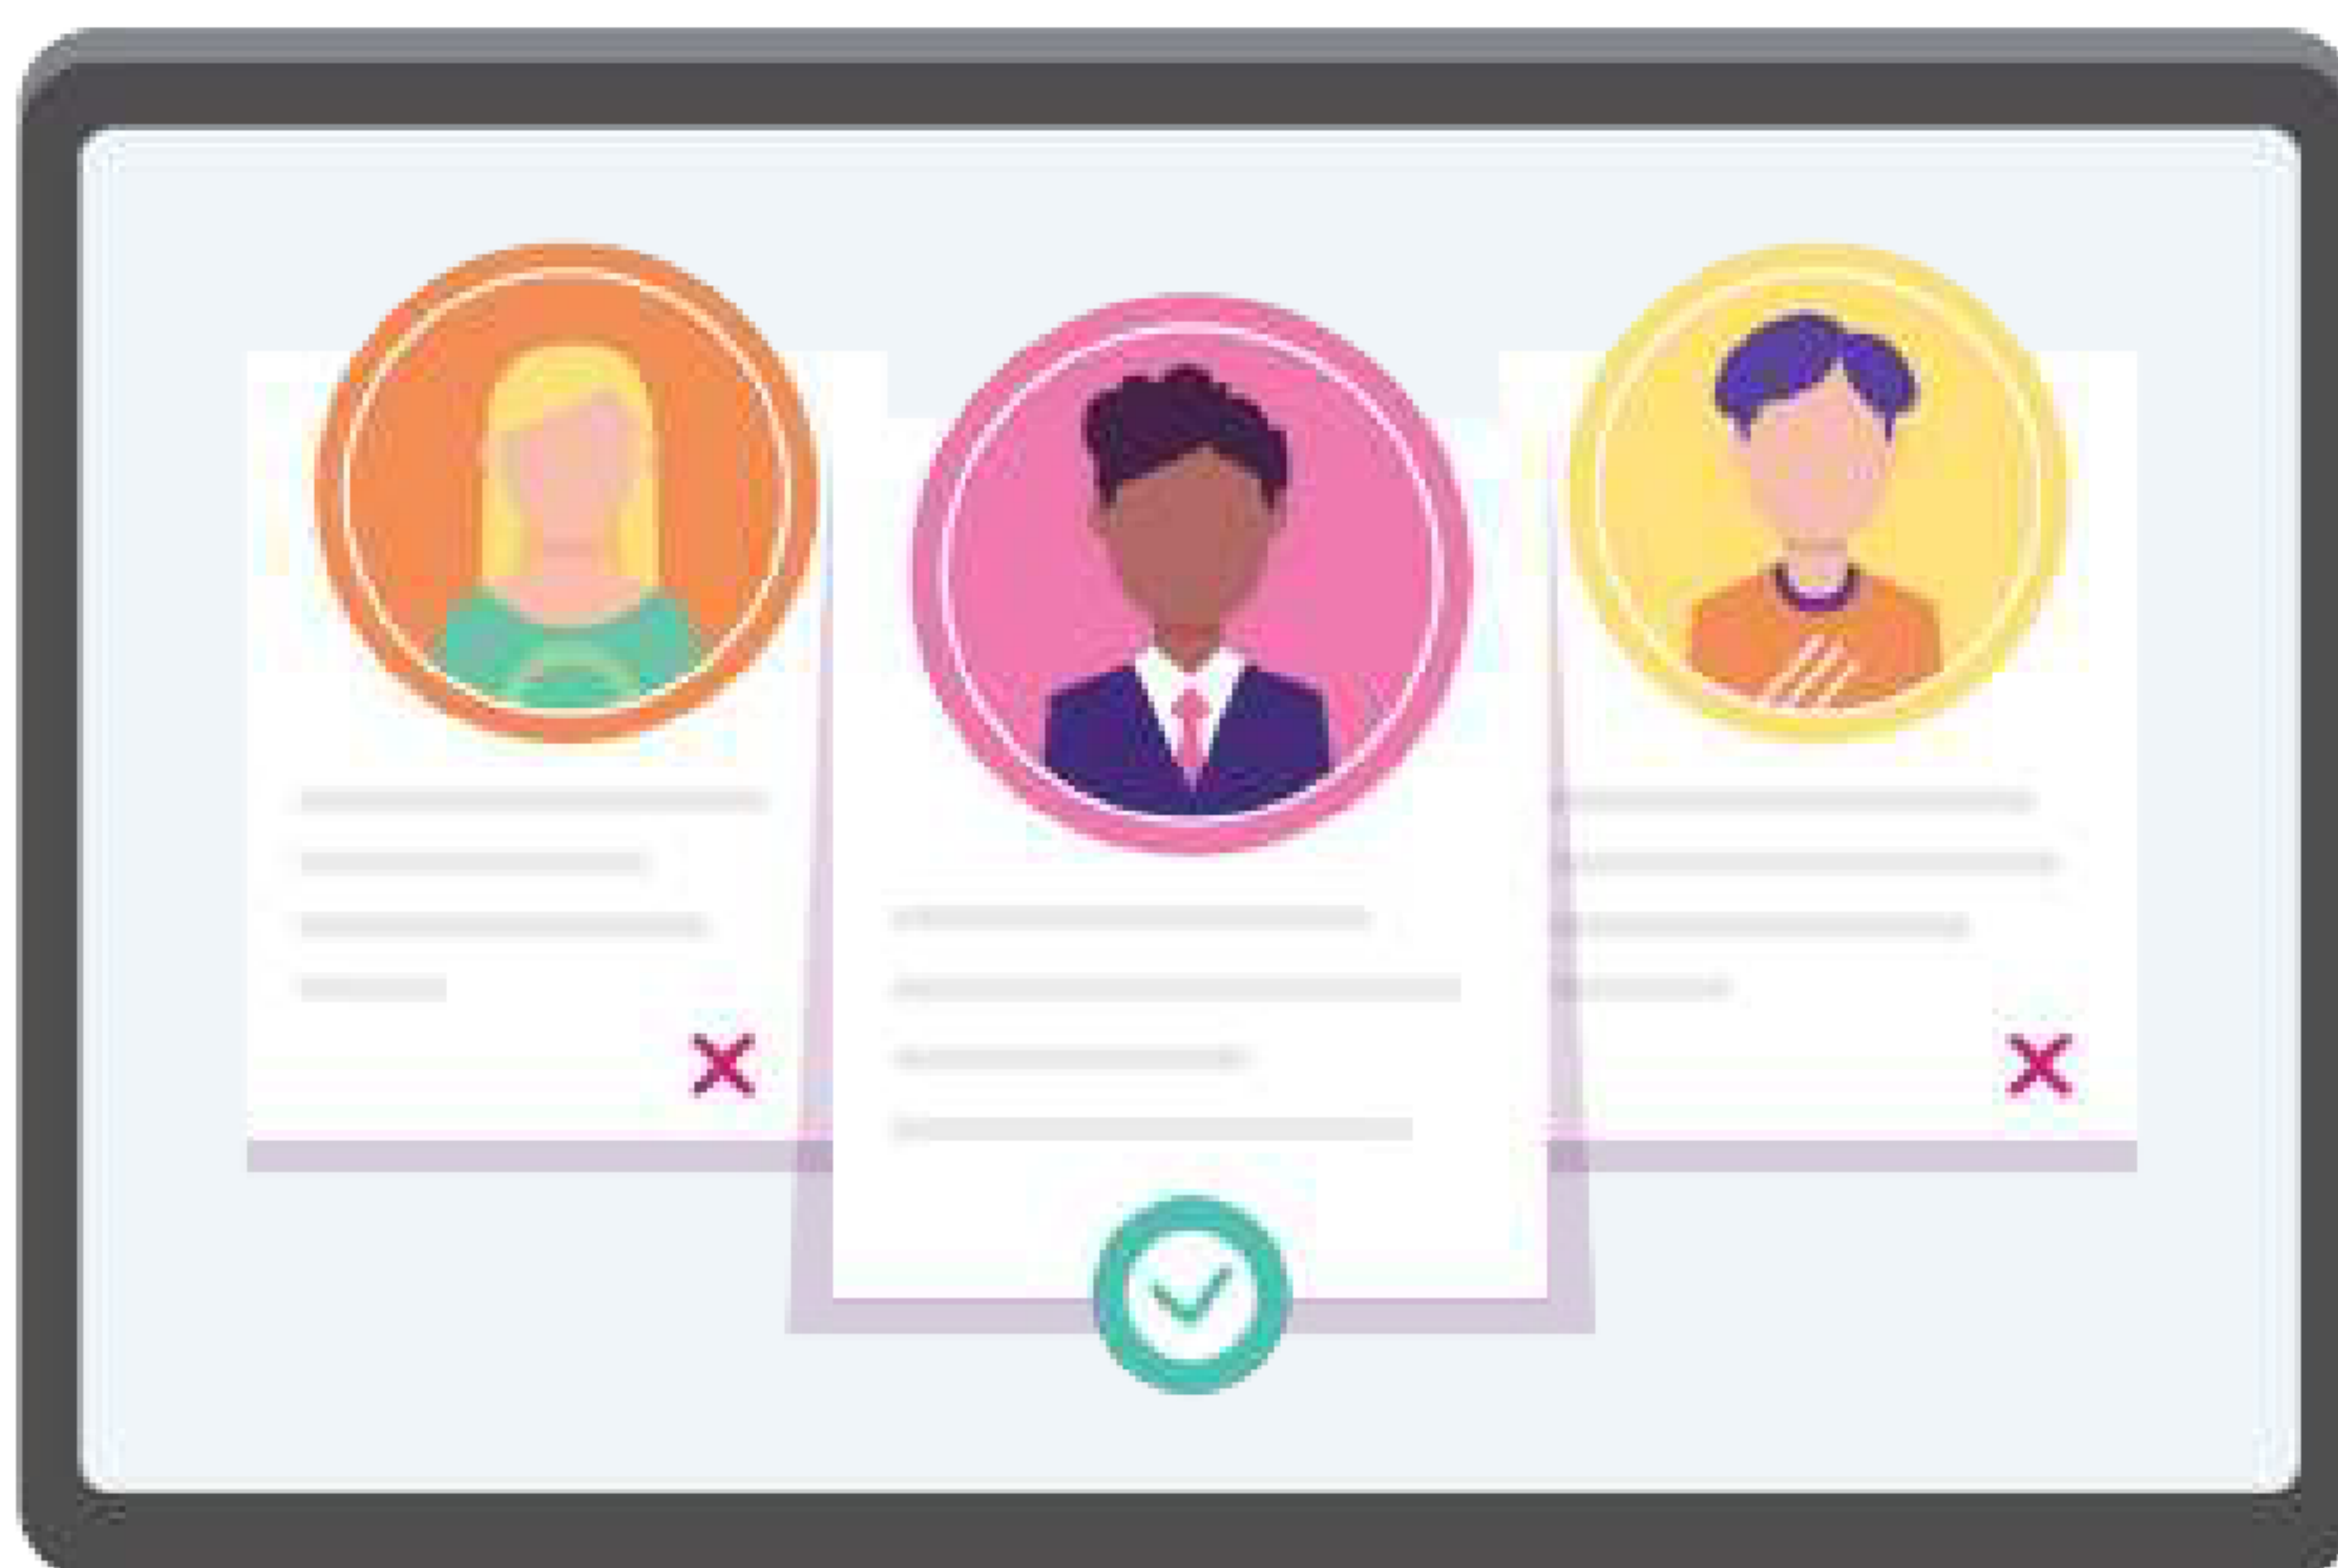

Once you have identified the critical positions, create a talent pool to fill these positions.

You should continuously map individuals in the market who have the capabilities to take over your critical positions. At any given time, you should have 2-3 potential candidates who would be interested in the job. You can keep engaging with these potential candidates in public forums to maintain their interest.
