It is preferable to develop talent in house. In emergency situations, you will be able to quickly fill the position. The internal successor is already aligned with the values and job responsibilities. Hence, an internal successor always has an advantage. However, you must not compromise if the capability gap is significant, and it is logical to bring in talent from outside.

3. Successor Communication

The role holder defines the internal successors of the position. There can be 2-3 internal successors. You may communicate to successors that they are named as successors for the position. Naming the successor improves stickiness of the key employees.

John and Doe are the successors.
