

Cash In Hand

As the name suggests, cash in hand refers to the amount of money an employee gets at the end of the month after all the deductions, including taxes. It is also called take home salary.

Review this example. A candidate was getting INR 2.4 lakhs per annum. Her take home salary was 20,000 per month. She was offered 3.0 lakhs per annum. She was expecting INR 25,000 in the salary. When she got her first pay slip. She was shocked. She got 19,000 only. This happened because the recruiter did not add components like retiral and insurance to the cash in hand salary to covert her current salary to equivalent CTC. Recruiter should have given salary increase on the equivalent CTC. This is a common mistake of comparing oranges with apples.

That brings us to the end of the chapter. You would have got a sense of Total Rewards, CTC, and cash in hand.