

4. Analyze

Compare the job descriptions. Compare salary ranges and benefits. Look at the geographical, industry, and pay equity trends. On that basis, identify the areas where you need to adjust compensation ranges. You need to finalize:

According to the analysis, determine the market median. Market Median is the benchmark used to determine whether you are paying less or more than the market. If your salary midpoint is lower than the market median, then you pay less than the market average. If your salary midpoint matches the market median salary, then you are paying at par with the competition.