

You should start connecting with the candidate to WIRE the candidate for the new role before the official joining date. The WIRE covers four key areas to create a positive first impression and prepare the candidate to be successful in the new role.

a. Welcome - It is more than just sending welcome emails. It involves creating an experience where the selected candidate feels welcome.

b. Introduction - Introduce selected candidates to the culture and values of the organization. Give insights into the job role and policies. Arrange a virtual or physical tour of the office.

c. Resource Allocation - Provide learning materials to prepare oneself for the role. You may also provide additional online resources necessary for performing the job role.

d. Engagement - Engage by connecting regularly and answering the queries. Provide the support requested by the selected candidate. Do arrange a virtual meeting with the hiring manager and peers.
