

However, some of these channels will differ depending on your target market. But you can consider some of these:

Organic Search

Organic search refers to the unpaid results that appear in search engines when users search for specific terms, driven by search engine algorithms and relevance.

➡ To do this, you need to invest in something called Search Engine Optimisation (SEO).

SEO helps make the website rank higher and easier to find when people search for things related to your business. It's like making the website more attractive to search engines so they show it to more people who might be interested.

Just like how social media and content marketing help spread the word about your business, SEO helps make sure people can find you when they're looking for what you offer.
