

Create a Brand Kit

Create a brand kit that involves elements that convey your brand story to your audience.

Building a brand kit includes:

Colour palette: choosing colours that reflect your brand. For example, if your brand is energetic or fun, you might use bright colours.

Logo: Your logo is the visual representation of your brand, so it should be about what your product or service is by considering using symbols that align.

Typography: the font you choose helps to communicate the personality of your brand. For example, for a more serious or professional offering, you might opt for classic typography.

Example: Swiggy

Swiggy's typography is bold, modern, and slightly rounded, reflecting its energetic and friendly brand personality.

Colour Palette - Bright orange conveys energy and excitement.

Logo - Represents brand name and its core service of food delivery, hinting at location.

Typography - The font used in the Swiggy logo is custom-designed, smooth and readable. It complements the brand's dynamic and fast-paced food delivery service while maintaining a welcoming and approachable feel.

Hence, carefully curating these elements can create a solid brand kit.
