

D. Agents and Brokers

Agents and brokers act as intermediaries between producers and consumers to facilitate the sale of products or services.

➡ Agents work on behalf of their clients to negotiate deals, generate leads, and close sales. They may specialise in specific industries or product categories and have expertise in understanding market dynamics and customer needs. Agents often earn commissions based on the value of the deals they help close.

➡ Brokers, on the other hand, bring together buyers and sellers, negotiate terms, and help finalise agreements. Brokers may operate in various industries, such as real estate, finance, or insurance, and earn commissions or fees for their services.

E. Franchisers/ Chain Businesses

Franchisers or chain businesses operate by granting franchisees the rights to open and operate outlets under their established brand name and business model. In exchange, franchisees pay initial fees and ongoing royalties to the franchiser for using the franchiser's brand, trademarks, and operating systems. McDonald's, Domino's, and Starbucks are examples of franchisers.
