

By partnering with e-commerce platforms, McCain Foods taps into the growing trend of online grocery shopping, making its products easily accessible to consumers who prefer to shop online.

Following are the popular B2C Channels.

A. E-commerce Platforms

E-commerce platforms provide businesses with online marketplaces where they can sell their products directly to consumers. Popular e-commerce platforms are Amazon, Shopify, and Etsy.

B. Retail Stores

Selling products through retail stores by partnering with department stores or retailers to reach consumers.

Walmart is one of the largest retail chains globally, known for its extensive selection of merchandise at competitive prices. Target is another well-known retail chain that offers a wide range of products, from apparel and home goods to electronics and groceries. Brands like Nike, KitchenAid, and Levi's partner with Target to distribute their products across its network of stores and also through its website.

24/7 is a globally well-known retail chain specialising in convenience stores. They offer a wide range of products including snacks, beverages, toiletries, basic groceries, and sometimes even hot food items.