

At the initial stages of building the company, achieving PMF should be the guiding principle. It helps you focus on the most impactful actions to either confirm or reject whether the product fits the market. It pushes to prioritise the actions that will drive the most significant strides towards achieving PMF. This means constantly asking yourself what actions will bring you closer to validating that your product meets the needs of your target market, and then taking those actions in a prioritised manner.

At this earliest stage of company-building, PMF should serve as your North Star. It serves as a forcing function, prompting you to identify and prioritize the highest-leverage actions that will drive the most meaningful progress toward proving or disproving product-market fit.

6.2 Blue Ocean Strategy: Redefining Product-Market Fit Strategy- Build your own Market

Imagine you're struggling to find a perfect fit in an existing market. This is your cue to innovate and create your own market. If you're struggling to find a perfect fit in an existing market, this encourages you to innovate and create your own market.

