

Product Market Refinement

Product market refinement is an ongoing process after the initial launch of a product. It ensures that your product remains responsive to customers and meets their needs and preferences. It can be done by gathering feedback and working on it to improve your product. Thus, refining your product based on customer feedback helps maintain its relevance, competitiveness, and sustainability in the market over time.

Following the launch, this process involves the following key steps:

