

3. Relaunching

When relaunching a product, it's crucial to re-evaluate the marketing strategy to ensure clear communication with your audience. Clearly communicate the value proposition of your product to your audience. Focusing on highlighting any improvements or changes to the product.

- Re-evaluate your product branding, including packaging.
- Create excitement for your product among your audience to create pre-launch hype through various channels such as social media, marketing, and campaigns.
- Show changes or improvements in advertisements during a product relaunch for effective communication of value to customers.

For example, brands like Colgate frequently highlight enhancements, such as “Now with extra 20% salt.” This attracts the attention of the customer and encourages them to try out the new and improved version, driving success for your relaunch.

