

Augmented Product

Here, the focus goes beyond meeting customer expectations to provide additional features and services that improve the overall product experience. The customer experience can be enhanced by offering extra value beyond what is expected. It includes features like extended warranties, top-notch components or materials, exclusive software or applications, personalised customer support, or additional services.

Continuing with the smart phone example, augmented product features might include a premium camera with advanced photography capabilities, exclusive apps, or regular software updates that introduce new features and enhancements. Augmented products have a higher price point and increase customer satisfaction and loyalty.
