

The business model developed by Alexander Osterwalder comprises nine essential components.

1. Customer Segments

The customer segment section of the business model Canvas helps you understand who your customers are. It starts by identifying the different groups of people or organisations that the business aims to serve and understanding their needs, preferences, and behaviours. What problems are they trying to solve? What are their pain points?

It starts by identifying the different groups of people or organisations that the business aims to serve and understanding their needs, preferences, and behaviours.

This approach ensures that offerings align with local demand, enhancing relevance and customer engagement.

Segmentation strategies are methods used to divide your target audience into distinct groups or segments based on their characteristics.