

7. Key Partnerships

Key partners are external organizations or individuals that a company collaborates with to enhance capabilities, mitigate risks, and acquire essential resources. Identifying key partners involves understanding who plays a crucial role in supporting your business model and how they contribute to its success.

Key partners may include suppliers who provide raw materials or inventory, manufacturers who produce goods, distributors who ensure product availability, technology providers who enable digital operations, strategic alliances that offer market expansion opportunities, joint ventures that drive innovation, and other stakeholders who add value to the business.

For instance, a retail business may partner with logistics companies to optimize its supply chain, ensuring timely and efficient product deliveries.

After determining your key resources and activities, you can simply identify Key Partnerships by asking yourself one simple question-

How do you Access, Deliver, Assets, Resources, Activites Efficiently?

Let’s apply this question to our McDonald’s newly launched digital order gateway.

Installation and Maintenance

Collaborate with tech providers for kiosk installation and ensure regular maintenance schedules.

2.

Software Development

Invest in or partner with a software development team to create and update the kiosk interface.