

8.1 Startup Capital

Startup capital is the key to turning your entrepreneurial vision into reality. It is the initial capital required to launch a new business. It includes the funds that covers essential expenses like developing products, conducting market research, paying legal fees, and other investments that are necessary in the early stages of business formation.

You can source it from personal savings, external investors, loans, or government programmes designed to support startups. Hence, it's the financial support that is needed to turn the entrepreneurial vision into a reality.
