

Is It a Fit?

Before you embark further, you must understand these three kinds of fit:

➤ Problem-Solution Fit

Problem-solution fit happens when there's evidence that customers genuinely value specific tasks, challenges, and benefits. You've identified the existence of a problem and come up with a solution that tackles your customers' jobs, pains, and gains. However, you still lack clear evidence that your customers are really interested in your value proposition and will actually buy it.

Let's re-look at the example of the Fitness Tracking App.

Here, the issue of accurately tracking calories is identified among health and fitness enthusiasts. User interviews and existing market research within the health and fitness industry confirm that many people struggle with this problem.

Hence, the Start-Up Calorie Tracker App is specifically designed to address this identified need. It provides a solution by offering an accurate calorie tracking feature that addresses the problem identified among users.