

2.3 Business to Consumer (B2C) Framework

B2C refers to businesses that sell products or services directly to individual consumers for personal use.. Examples: E-commerce stores, retail brands, food delivery services.

A. Understanding Consumer Demand

This involves understanding who your target consumers are, such as individuals, families, kids, workers, or professionals, and determining the level of demand for your product or service. You need to identify your target market demographics, such as age, income level, household size, needs, preferences, and purchasing power.

Identify Target Market Demographics

- ✓ Age
- ✓ Income Level
- ✓ Household Size
- ✓ Needs
- ✓ Preferences
- ✓ Purchasing Power

Conducting market research can help you analyze the demand for your products and services and determine if there is a sufficient market size to sustain your business. For example, if you are into the business of making chocolates, try to analyze the markets and see if let's say kids are the most preferred target customers for this type of business.
