

2.4 Business to Business (B2B) Framework

B2B refers to businesses that sell products or services to other businesses rather than individual consumers. Examples: Software-as-a-Service (SaaS) platforms, wholesale suppliers, corporate consulting.

A. Market Demand & Pricing

It is important to understand the needs of other businesses in your target market, how much they require your products or services, how many times they'll need them, and where they're geographically located. Pricing is also essential; you need to know what others are charging for similar services to set competitive rates.

B. Global vs. Local Strategy

Study whether your business has potential globally or just in local areas. If it is for the global market, are you planning to expand it globally or just focus locally? This will help you make expansion plans and growth strategies.
