

Align on Goals and Values

It is essential to align goals and values with those of your co-founders to prevent conflicts. If ultimate visions of both are fully aligned and committed to achieving them, it will help to keep each other motivated throughout the long journey of building a startup.

This builds strong trust and mutual respect, hence increasing the likelihood of success.

Where should you look for your co-founders?

The best place is to start with your existing network, which includes friends, families, colleagues, and acquaintances. If you have a rough idea of your business, then start it by discussing it with people over coffee. Word will naturally spread within your network, and you may come across people who impress you with their skills, expertise, or ideas.
