

To build a culture of “Bias for Action,” you can achieve it through two key actions in all such places

Psychological Safety: It means creating an environment where employees feel safe and comfortable taking risks without fear of suffering consequences. You can do it by appreciating them, even if the outcome is not in your favour.

Acknowledge them, value their efforts, and encourage them to take innovative solutions. Doing this can lead to greater creativity and success within the organisation.

Mentoring: Guiding employees on how to take calculated risks by showing the process that leads to potential outcomes and drawbacks. Teach them how to assess risks and consider alternative options so that they can make beneficial choices for the company.

