

d. Pre and Post-Hospitalisation

Pre Hospitalisation

Post Hospitalisation

Pre-hospitalisation expenses include medical consultations, diagnostic tests, and medications that are incurred before a patient is admitted to the hospital. Most insurance policies offer coverage for expenses for up to 30 days prior to hospitalisation.

Post-hospitalisation expenses refer to the costs incurred after the patient is discharged from the hospital, such as medical tests, follow-up and consultations. Typically, most insurance companies provide coverage for these expenses for a period of 45-90 days post-discharge. Also check what is the scope of coverage, as ideally there shouldn't be any limits.

When buying a health policy, don't forget to check if it includes coverage for both pre and post-hospitalisation expenses as they can add up to a significant amount.
