Which one you should take?

Top-Ups are considerably cheaper than Super Top-Ups but Super Top-Ups provide better coverage!

Generally, advisors suggest a Top-Up if they see that you do not have any major health issues, or don't expect to have them in the future. And Super Top-Ups if you're at a higher risk of chronic illnesses, requiring multiple hospitalisations in the future.

This is because when you have hospitalisations with large bills both top-ups & Super Top-ups will give you coverage. The major difference comes in when you have several, smaller bills - where Top-ups can become pretty useless.

So based on this before choosing either plan, consider your needs, medical history, and budget. Both plans provide valuable financial backup when your health insurance limits are exhausted, but they work differently based on your claims and the total expenses incurred.
