The value of real estate depends upon the demand and supply of property in that area.

The demand for a particular property depends on many factors like the type of property, location, the amenities in the vicinity, the general state of the economy, the builders' reputation if it is a building still under development and many other factors. Hence, no blanket statement can be made about whether a real estate investment will be profitable or not. I remember how my relatives in south Mumbai were getting 24Cr for their flat a few years ago, which they bought for less than 1Cr 40 years ago (more than 8.27% CAGR).
