

The idea of personalized coupon offerings isn't just on the web, either. Brand marketers are learning to become increasingly personal in their coupon offerings, with digital and mobile coupons relevant to today's consumer. In a 2012 AdWeek shopper marketing report, it was reported that a "Safeway Just 4 U" program was operating in over 1600 stores in the United States and Canada. The program offers digital coupons based on purchasing histories of the Shopper's Club card. Another grocery store, Kroger, has done the same thing for several years, through a partnership with an analytics company, dunnhumby, offering personalized deals that load directly to the customer's frequent shopper card.

"Brands and retailers are definitely able to better target their campaigns as a result of the amount of data that is at their fingertips today," Marco Muzzi, marketing director at Acuity Ads, said in the AdWeek article.

A disturbing thought? Or exactly what we all desire, a personalized savings? After all, everybody loves a good deal. And everyone loves coupons.

Don't they?
