

IMPLEMENTATION

Now you've reached the "getting started" hurdle in the world of couponing. As my wise husband often reminded me, the toughest part of any job is getting started. Your first step was to find a way of organization. Of course, the second part of that is to locate the coupons you will be organizing.

In searching for coupons, some points to remember:

- The majority of coupons, nearly 90 percent, are still found in the Sunday newspaper coupon inserts.
- Magazines, such as All You are excellent sources for coupons.
- Tear pads and blinkie coupon machines on the stores shelves are another great source. Keep your eyes on the prizes you will find attached to shelves near the products or in the little red boxes (blinkies) that attach to shelves and spit out pertinent coupons.
- On-package coupons or peel-offs (peelies), attached to the bottle or package, are increasingly common and hard to miss.
- Store coupons are located right in the store's ads or online on their websites. Store coupons can usually be combined with manufacturer's coupons for maximized savings.
- Internet-printed, online coupons are available on sites such as Smartsource.com and Coupons.com

Returning to the subject of motivation and the science of shopping—when shopping either online or in the aisles of a brick and mortar store, always keep in mind that your goal is to save money and the store's goal is to see that you part with more of it. It's as simple as that. If you keep in mind that even the store's layout is designed for that purpose you can
