

As I've gathered information from couponers and former refunders throughout the United States, I was reminded of good deals I'd forgotten about and others I hadn't even been aware of. Gathering those stories and quotes became more than a trip down memory lane for me. It reminded me of how much couponing and refunding has meant to me throughout the years, and how I always felt a part of something much bigger than myself—a cultural phenomenon and an entire community of coupon users.
