

George Parker George Parker has spent more than 40 years on Madison Avenue. He's won Lions, CLIOs, EFFIES, and the David Ogilvy Award. His blog is adscam.typepad.com, which he describes as, "required reading for those looking for a piss & vinegar view of the world's second oldest profession." His latest book, Confessions of a Mad Man, makes the TV show Mad Men look like Sesame Street.

"The saving money phenomenon is one of the most powerful consumer trends we have ever seen. Coupon Crazy goes beyond the headlines and television shows to unearth what this trend is all about, who it affects and why and underscores why it is here to stay. Every marketer, retailer and consumer needs to read this book, it offers the lessons to succeed both professionally and personally."

Phil Lempert, Editor, Columnist & CEO, www.SupermarketGuru.com

"Coupon Crazy" is a must read for any retailer or marketer in today's compulsively frugal world. Mary Potter Kenyon knows her subject cold and her compelling book will not only help your business get coupon savvy, her tips will save you a bundle in your personal life. A coupon manifesto that comes with its own built in bonus!"

Mary Lou Quinlan, Founder, Just Ask a Woman, author, What She's Not Telling You