

Ed and Sue were a lot like the rest of us. They knew their ATM codes, the phone number to the pizza joint, and their kids' shoe sizes. They knew a lot of numbers, but last year, if you would have asked them about their credit score, they would have given you a blank stare. Now, they have their credit reports in hand and they see that they are indeed Average Americans. Their FICO score lands in the zone that creditors love, right in the mid-600s. Fixing their credit score has become priority number one for Ed and Sue.

A Long Road

The road that led you to where you are today, holding Debt Cures in your hands, may have been a long and winding road. Maybe you have fallen upon hard times and your debt has grown like a weed. Now you know that the banks, the credit card companies, and the lending institutions have been the ones watering the weed and helping it to grow faster. The federal government is holding the water can and watching the weeds grow and choke out the good grass. Instead of coming to the aid of the American citizen, the feds sit back and admire the weeds.

America is the land of the free and the home of the brave. Slavery was supposed to have ended with the Civil War, but some folks are still enslaved to the banks and the creditors. All I can say is, "Not any more!" We have already covered a lot of information in these first few chapters. Mainly, you now know that obtaining and fixing any inaccuracies on your credit score is crucial, and increasing your FICO score is essential, for your current and long term situation. Doing so puts dollars back in your pockets and helps you pull the weeds out of your garden.

The Right Path

"By persisting in your path, though you forfeit the little, you gain the great." Ralph Waldo Emerson was a very wise man. Maybe you have been on the path of mounting debt and as a result, mounting pressure. It is time to relieve that burden. If you persist in your path
