Getting a book written, proofed, and published is no small job. I want to thank the many people who helped bring this book from the idea stage into the final printed pages that you now hold in your hand.

I know that you too will be thankful for their hard work when you read about what goes on behind the closed doors of the banking and credit card industry. The powerful executives and their pals in Washington may be motivated by greed, but I am powered by need – the need to reveal what is happening, so you can get out from under their grip.

The facts and information have been gathered here for you. My sincere thanks to all who made this book what it is. The shared goal of all involved is to give you the information so that you have the power – the power to cure your debt, the power to create wealth, and the power to take back control of your life! That deserves a round of applause!
