

A License to Steal

I go to my mailbox every day just like you, and nearly every day, no exaggeration, certainly at least four times a week, I receive a credit card offer beckoning me with “You’re Pre-Approved!” “0% Interest Rate!” “Transfer all your balances!” Many of these companies have now gotten so bold that they even say in bright red ink printed across the envelope: “URGENT! Don’t throw me away!” But I do throw them away, and you should too.

I’m not the only one getting inundated with credit card application offers. You get them. Your neighbor gets them. Your college-age child gets them. We all do. Even my dog has gotten one. Fortunately, Princess had the good sense to chew it up. The credit card companies send out four billion pieces of mail like this every year. That’s right: 4 BILLION.

That’s crazy.

And why do they bother with the time and expense of all those mailings? Because they are making billions of dollars by ripping off the American citizen! The credit card companies, the banks, the mortgage lenders, the payday loan companies, the debt consolidation agencies, the debt collectors, and the entire consumer lending industry are designed to screw the American consumer. That’s me, that’s you, that’s our friends and family. And you know what? For lack of a better way of saying it, I’m mad as hell and I’m not going to take it anymore. And neither should you.

It wasn’t always this way, but there is a problem in America that is not being talked about and the US government, that’s right the federal
