

Two Magic Words

x 3

“Shazam! Abracadabra!”

~ Old Magicians

No, those are not the two magic words. They are fun words to say, but are not the ones that have any impact on your financial resume. Feel free to go ahead and try though. Maybe if you fold up your credit report into a tiny square, cover it with the palm of your hand and say “Abracadabra!”, a high score will magically appear when you open it again. If that works, let me know.

Chances are, it won’t; and you’ll be right back to where you started – staring at your credit report with bleary eyes and wondering if there’s any kind of “quick fix.” Well, there is. And it doesn’t involve canaries or silk scarves or any other kind of hocus pocus. In fact, it is much simpler than that.

Bad Information = Bad Credit

As I have said, repeatedly, in one way or another, credit reports make the credit world go round. Credit problems bring your credit world crashing to your feet. The frustrating part is that most bad credit is just bad information.