

In nearly all cases, your home is a very good investment. There is not much financial sense in throwing your money away in rent for years and years. So now you have done it; you bought the house, planted some flowers, and got a puppy for the backyard; or you got the river front condo in the heart of downtown that you have always dreamed about. Congratulations. Now what?

That is when the second most common desire of all Americans kicks in. We all want to pay off our mortgage sooner than 30 years! You can!

Big Bucks

Of course you want to pay off that mortgage quicker; we all do. The house payment is often your largest monthly expense, and most people take out a thirty-year mortgage. That is an awful lot of years to pay. If you take out a shorter-term loan, the interest rate might be better, but the payments are higher. Maybe you can't afford that high of a payment or maybe you just want to play it safe with the 30-year mortgage. Maybe all your lender will offer you is a 30-year mortgage.
