

Fees, Fees, Fees

Fees and points have no limits. They are the fine print, the nitty gritty, the name of the game, the bread and butter of the consumer lending industry. Basically, interest rates may be limited, but the fees are carte blanche, and credit card companies take full advantage in every way possible. Let's call a spade a spade, and let's call these fees what they really are: interest.

One banker said, "The trick is charging a lot, repeatedly..."

The banks and the credit card companies can charge any number of fees, in any amount, and call them anything they want – activation fee, annual fee, monthly maintenance fee, sign-up fee, credit protection fee, late fee, over-limit fee, we-are-greedy-fee – and the net effect is that we, the “consumer,” could end up paying 50%, 60%, 70% in “interest.” The banks are allowed to be legal loan sharks.

They have gone mad with greed. We the people are no longer human beings, fellow citizens of America; these companies see us as nothing more than numbers consuming products. All we are now in their eyes are “consumers.” If we are not a consumer, we are not important. We are merely a country of consumers, not individuals, not living, breathing, human beings. This is an element in our society that needs to be changed. Who resists change the most? The ones making the money off of those of us who once were blind. But now we see! It is my job to open your eyes to the scams going on in the credit card industry, the student loan industry, and the debt collection industry. Once you know, you will never fall into their traps again. Just because they give you money, they do not own you forever. You don't have to be a slave to them. Stop thinking that you don't have options. You do!

A Tangled Web

The stories of their power and corruption are endless. The following pages are chock full of them. Maybe the name Provident does not ring a bell, but this credit card company was one of the largest credit card issuers in the country, and you probably have received an offer from them just like I have in my mailbox. They have sent over one billion offers in the mail, so it is a good bet that you have been targeted by them.
