

that way. That's how they make their money – being able to hit you with fees. $29 from customers month after month adds up to a lot of money.

Personal Slaves

Just like casinos are in business to make money, credit card companies are in business to make money. They are not offering a service out of the kindness of their hearts. They are bloodsuckers looking for patsies. A major senior official of one of the largest banking groups in the world allegedly said that they make most of their money off the lower and middle class because they are, and I quote, the “easiest to rob.” They have no shame in stating that they make their profits off those people who are most desperately in need of credit cards and loans. I sat in a meeting once with high-level bankers and I was told, “We love consumer lending. We want them to be late; we want them to just make their minimum monthly payments. We virtually are in their wallets for the rest of their lives.”

Aghast, I declared, “It sounds like they are your personal slaves.”

Without missing a beat, this banker replied with a grin, “Slavery is alive and well in America.”

Well, I beg to differ. These bankers and corporate executives may think that they are the Goliaths, but they have forgotten that David was victorious, and Goliath fell and he fell hard. It is time that we revoke their license to steal.

If you are one of the millions of Americans who have some debt, and I'm not talking about a home mortgage necessarily, but a car loan, a student loan, a personal loan for a boat or a vacation, credit card debt, whatever the case may be – don't think you are stuck forever. They want you to feel like you have no options, but you do. They don't have to own you forever. They don't have to own you at all. You can get control of your debts, and you can get control of your life.
