

If you have bad credit, you can start fresh, right this minute, and be on your way to wealth. Starting a company is not as scary as some people tend to think. The benefits are worth it. There are many advantages to having your own corporate business, and best of all, you may be able to access a large line of credit. That means you will not need a huge outlay of cash from your pocket.

It's Not Hard

Let's assume that you are currently in the process of improving your personal credit score. An individual and a business have separate credit histories. You can start a company and immediately take off with excellent credit!

Forming your own business does not have to be a long, labor-intensive process. You, as the sole owner of your business, can become a corporation or an LLC (limited liability corporation) very easily. You do not need partners or investors.

By incorporating, you get the advantage of corporate tax laws. You can form a corporation without an attorney, and the forms and filing fees will often cost less than $500. However, it is smart to have a lawyer or a financial planner assist you.

Ideas

In order to form a corporation and start making money, the first step is obvious – you need to have a business. Maybe you already have a business, a dog walking business or a hair salon. Perhaps you are a handyman or house painter. Maybe you have always dreamed of starting your own business. Now is the perfect time. Ed had been rebuilding old clocks as a hobby for years. He decided to turn this hobby into a legitimate business venture.

The author Joyce Carol Oates, I believe, once said, “Ideas come from the craziest places.” Let your ideas flow. When you are just getting started, it may seem overwhelming to think of all the possibilities, because they are countless. With a business, you can branch into many divisions and still enjoy the overall umbrella of protection of being a
