

Successful

That is how successful people operate. They see where there is a need or a want, and they fill it. I might enjoy making wool scarves, but if I live in Miami, there is not going to be much demand for what I can supply. But if there is an influx of people with their little dogs, then I can be smart like Sue and start a dog grooming business.

Ed's hobby of fixing old clocks can become a booming business, because few people have the expertise. There is a need, a demand Ed can supply. In order to be successful, you need to target what people are looking for, instead of trying to convince them that what they really need is a yarn potholder that you learned to make after you bought a bunch of discount yarn, hoping, and failing, to sell on eBay.

Can Do
