

FREE MONEY!

"I would not exchange my leisure hours for all the wealth in the world."

~ Comte de Mirabeau

Why do we desire wealth? Just to be rich? No.

Think about it.

We want to be free from the strain of the daily struggle where all we do is get out of bed, go to work, pay the bills, and get up the next day and do it all over again. We want the freedom to not worry about money more than we want money. Does that make sense?

If you have money to pay for the basics of life, plus you have a nest egg and can save for retirement and can pay for your kids' education and can take a vacation and have a little left over to invest, you are wealthy! The dollar signs and the number of zeros don't matter. You don't have to set a goal of how much money you want; the goal is to live your life free from the stress of money.

Curing your debt is the best thing you can do for your life as a whole. To be able to wake up each day and not have a feeling of dread wash over you is a sign of being wealthy. And that is also healthy. When you are free to make decisions based upon your dreams, and not what you owe to the banks or credit card companies, you are wealthy. When you indeed have leisure hours to spend with your family and your friends, pursuing the desires of your heart, you are indeed wealthy.
