

As you look over these pages, keep in mind that some of this information may be out of date. Changes may have occurred after this book was printed. Websites are constantly going down, and agencies are constantly amending their programs, so do the research and adjust your actions accordingly. All that said, let's move forward...

The Hardest Part Is Done for You Right Here

Some people don't know that free money exists. Others may have been aware, but quickly became overwhelmed trying to find it. One of the greatest pleasures for me in this entire book is helping you find these sources that can get you on your way to wealth creation. I don't know how they did it before the internet, but the technology that we now take for granted is your new best friend. Even if you do not have a home computer, you can use one for free at the public library or go over to a friend's house. With this information, your friends will want to do their own searching too!

The saying goes, "The best things in life are free." To that, I would like to also add, "The best sites in life are free." Don't pay for access to online databases. You can learn where to find the same sources yourself; I will tell you how. Right here, right now.

One site that is fantastic, one I find really incredible, is www.govbenefits.gov. This site has information on thousands of programs. It is easy to navigate, which I appreciate. Some websites can seem so confusing. I like it when they make it easy for me!

There are two ways to maneuver this site. Let's assume you have no idea what you might qualify for or what you are looking for specifically. Click on the "Start Here" button. It will take you to an easy-to-answer questionnaire. There are some questions to go through and depending upon how fast you read, it will take you 5 to 10 minutes to complete. The questions are simple and straightforward, and completely anonymous. You do not give your name or social security number. The only personal questions are age, gender, and income level.

After you answer the questions, a list of possible grant or benefit programs pops up that you could be eligible for. Nothing could be
