

lay off thousands of workers. They borrowed a tidy sum in government-guaranteed loans, and they got back on their feet. If Chrysler can borrow over one billion dollars from the feds, you can get your piece of the pie too. It is a huge buffet. There is plenty for everyone.

Now, Go and Do

You can contact the websites, the agencies; you can do your own research. You are now able to see that the possibilities are endless. There are generic programs offering money to train your employees, and there are specific grants, for example, like ones for libraries that serve Native Hawaiians.

I have gotten you started here on where to look. Don't be intimidated. Finding the grants is the time consuming part and Debt Cures has helped you on your way. When you find a grant, you'll see that many grant applications are done online. Follow the instructions, step by step. Different grants ask for different things. If you have questions, contact that agency directly. Most have help sections on their websites to guide you through the process.

For the federal government agency directory, you can contact www.firstgov.gov or www.pueblo.gsa.gov/call or 1-880-FED-INFO. There is also a giant book if you want paper to read, during a period of hibernation perhaps. It's 2400 pages. Detailed grant information is printed in the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance and is available for $75. You can order it from the US Government Bookstore at <http://bookstore.gpo.gov/actions/GeneralSearch.do>.

If you have a question for a state agency or department, the state information office can direct you. The contact information for each state is listed as follows:

ALASKA
www.state.ak.us
907-465-2111

ARKANSAS
www.state.ar.us
501-682-3000

COLORADO
www.colorado.gov
303-866-5000

ARIZONA
<http://az.gov>
602-542-4900

CALIFORNIA
www.ca.gov
916-322-9900

CONNECTICUT
www.ct.gov
860-240-0222