

Hanky Panky

"I have not yet begun to fight!"

~ John Paul Jones

Not all statements are universally true, but there is one statement I think is: Most Americans want true financial independence. We do not want to be slaves to our debt, and we desire to be financially wealthy. Those two goals can go hand in hand. The beauty of the Debt Cures methods is that they will show you ways to do just that.

Another statement that I believe to be fair: Most people of this grand United States of America have no idea that the federal government is getting in the way of their financial independence.

Trust Is Dead

In general, we Americans are too trusting. People of other countries often view Americans as naïve and childlike. It is time we grow up. We are buried deep in debt, and hindered from achieving wealth, because the government allows it! The feds are aware of the games being played by the banking industry and the credit card companies. The boys in Washington aren't doing anything to halt the nefarious practices of the financial power brokers because the Big Money Guys give big money to their election campaign collection baskets. It's politics, it's a big game, and the only loser is the American citizen.