

same outrageous manner. I know, I know. It is just one more thing that makes us smack our foreheads and wonder what in the world the federal government is doing, or not doing, by letting them get away with such conduct.

Shake your fists and rail against the system if that makes you feel any better. The system is far from perfect, and the creatures who make their living off the system are not saints. I do not have to tell you who the villains are in our story or that it is unwise to trust them. The important thing is that we know how to defeat the villains. We can fight fire with fire. Or better said, you can arm yourself with a little bit of knowledge and watch your debts disappear!

Repeat After Me

Being a guy that likes to write books, I know that words matter. What we say or don't say is vital. When it comes to your debt elimination strategy, what you say or don't say is critical. Follow the Debt Cures advice, and when you find out that it really works, you will be telling everyone you know what to say and what not to say!

For old debt: Sorry, Charlie. The statute of limitations has run out on this debt. Stop all contact with me. This debt has expired. You can't touch it. You can't touch me. Leave me alone.

For any other debt: We'll give this a little more attention later, but you need to know that even if the debt is not expired, it could still be wiped off your record. There are many times debt is reported in error. So absolutely any time that you get a call from any creditor, or any collector, follow these guidelines...

Tip #1 – Never admit that you owe the debt. You might not and with the Debt Cures methods, you may be able to eliminate or greatly reduce your debt, so always be smart and always be vague. This tactic is NOT a debt cure: Hello, Mr. Mean Collection Agent. You say I owe $10,000? Well, gee, you must be right. Let me send you a check right away.

Tip #2 – The debt collectors hone their skills and sharpen their claws on the naïve and unsuspecting citizen. The easiest way to avoid entrapment is to not agree, and when talking about the
