

is up to you to make a periodic phone call and check on your rate. You can explain that you have been a long-time, good paying customer. If they don't lower your rate, you will drop them. Simple as that.

Ask and you shall receive. Be persistent if you have to, but a small investment of your time on the phone can save you thousands of dollars. Seriously, I believe this is a surprisingly effective technique that very few people know about. Even more surprising, it often works!

A lower rate can dramatically
lower your debt!

Credit card companies love to raise your rates, but they won't lower them, unless you ask. How about reducing a 20% interest rate to 10.5%? Cutting a high rate like that, in half, is impressive. One follower of these methods had his rate of 9.99% dropped all the way to nothing! 0% for six months! Ask! You never know what they might do! Find out what rate you are paying now. One gal had been paying an outrageous 28% for the last six months, and she didn't even know it until she called. She is now paying a much more reasonable rate of 12.8%! Want to feel great? Call and ask to cut your rate! You never know unless you ask.

Spend a Minute, Save a Lot!

You only have to spend a few minutes of your time and you literally can save hundreds or thousands of dollars. Write a simple script for yourself if that makes you feel more comfortable. Hello, my name is Ed Jones. I need to know what my current interest rate is with you. This is the part where you pause and they tell you. If it is not a good rate, you say: Wow, that seems high. I have a bunch of offers from other companies who will give me a lower rate. Could you match the rates being offered by your competitors?

Even the most phone-shy person can handle that script. Some people get the hang of it after a few calls and get really brazen. I have heard of one guy who likes to play his own version of Deal or No Deal. He'll ask for his rate to be cut in half, or he will ask for it to be knocked down by 10%. He has even asked for 0% APR! You've got nothing to lose, and who knows, they could say "yes." This simple phone call technique works. Keep it polite. The key is to kill these fat-cat credit
