

One misperception people often have when they are drowning in their debt is that they think bankruptcy is the only lifesaver. Everywhere you turn you see an ad for a bankruptcy law firm, begging you to come to them; on television, on the radio, on the internet. They are everywhere. No wonder people have bankruptcy on the brain. These lawyers are planting the seed.

Avoid Bankruptcy

We will dive into bankruptcy concerns later in the book, but please be aware that to keep your credit report and credit score in good standing, you should avoid the bankruptcy route. With Debt Cures, you typically don't have to file for bankruptcy. You're not Cinderella, so don't look to bankruptcy as the fairy-godmother solution to end all your problems. It is not a cure-all by any means. Your student loans, your alimony, and your child support won't be going anywhere.

Be wary of debt
and bankruptcy.

But I know bankruptcy happens. Especially when medical bills are involved. The medical practices usually are very aggressive in their collection tactics. Medical bills can be a double or triple whammy, encompassing emotional trauma, physical health issues, and financial concerns.

Tina's son was born with what appeared to be a blockage in his throat. He unexpectedly had to stay in the intensive care unit for three days. Tina received a bill for $35,000. Her savings account was wiped out and she just didn't have the money to pay it off. Tina was forced into bankruptcy. Making matters worse, a collection agency was hired to collect this debt, saying that the bankruptcy didn't cover it. For Tina and all the others who find themselves in the same sinking ship, Debt Cures is the lifeboat you have been waiting for.

Bankruptcy is not the quick fix that some shady lawyers make it out to be. You won't be barred from obtaining credit ever again, but you will be targeted for astronomical fees. If you have already filed for bankruptcy, don't wallow in despair. I will show you ways in which you can rebuild your credit.
