

well. They expect and want heinous profits, but they don't want to earn their money through honest efforts; they want to trick the American public, and then sit back and count their stacks of coins like Ebenezer Scrooge.

The big profits for the credit card companies come from the 90 million people who do not pay off their credit card debt each month. These people are labeled by the industry as the “revolvers,” and this is the target group, the ones that the banks and the lenders and the credit card companies want to keep corralled. Edward Yingling, president of the American Bankers Association, called the revolvers the “sweet spot.” They, the bankers, have a lot of tactics, deliberately misleading practices, to keep the revolvers right where they want them, continually going around and around the revolving door of credit. Revolving doors make me dizzy, and the lending industry makes me angry. The best way to get revenge is to get even. How do we go about that? We get our credit reports and our credit scores, and we take control. We don't have to be the pawns in their big bucks games. Once we learn what they do and how they do it, we are no longer under their thumb. We start where they start – with the credit report.

What Is on Your Credit Report

Call me crazy, but I think Ed and Sue, and you, should throw a credit report party. Invite a group of people in and share your Debt Cures know-how. If you learn of a good restaurant, you tell all your friends, don't you? So if you learn the way out of debt and the way to wealth, you should tell all your friends as well. Fire up the computer and play credit report poker. Whoever has the highest score wins. Some folks may want to keep their private information private and may prefer not to divulge their score. They still can take part and get their online report, and learn what to do to improve the score. When you are all out of debt and have become millionaires, they will thank you for sharing your tips. I am not joking. Later on, I will cover how you could get a line of credit of up to $1 million.

It all starts with the credit report. The format may vary depending upon which credit bureau is providing the credit report, but the data should be basically the same. There are four main categories of
