

considering doing so, until they received notice that two of the credit card issuers were considering filing fraud charges against them.

The potential consequences of that wake-up call forced them to face reality and make major changes to their financial management, as well as commit to repay the loans.