

They want to know, given the symptoms, how sure they can be that the patient has the new viral disease and not the already known viral diseases. These researchers can then enter the data they recorded, the correlations and causations they found in symptoms, and the new viral disease they wanted to diagnose into an LLM.

Then, the LLM, who will already be trained in medical information, could build a model that generates the probability percentage they seek.

