

Then, the website application will start analysing the document automatically. This is a freemium tool, i.e. most of its features are free, and some are behind a paywall. A good thing about this application is that in addition to the summary, it also presents you with suggestions for questions you can ask. If you have another question, you can type it and press submit.

For now, let's see what happens when you click on one of the suggested questions, i.e. "Can you explain the impact of frequency bands on data transmission speeds in the context of 5G?"

Then, the application will look at the entire document's content and generate an answer. In this case, it generated the following answer.

This application will also give you the page number used as a source.
