

Unsupervised ML involves giving machine data that is not labelled. For this now, consider that you have bananas and apples, but do not tell the machine what a banana is and what an apple is. You simply present both types of fruits to them. When you do that, machines typically try to understand patterns in this data. One pattern is shape. Apples are round, and bananas are curved.

Unsupervised ML

Input Raw Data

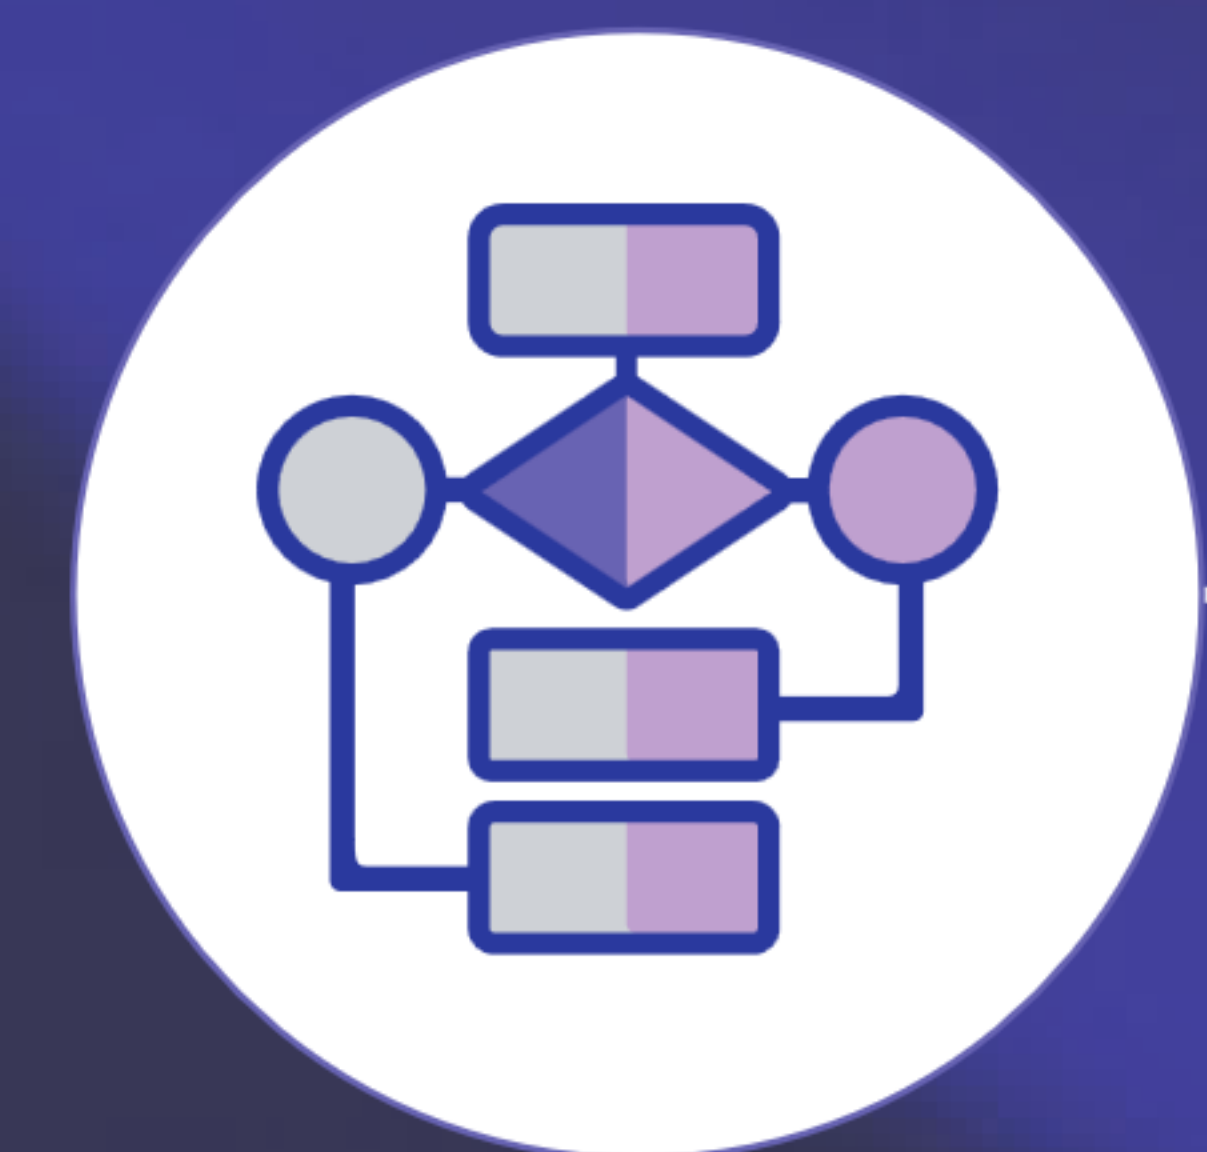

Unlabeled Data

Machines Find
Patterns

Interpretation

Algorithms