

People with this orientation buy new vehicles only and have at least conditional loyalty to a dealer or set of dealers. Most affluent people have strong make/brand preferences concerning motor vehicles. So when they decide to buy a particular make of vehicle, loyalists already have a dealer in mind. They see certain benefits in buying new vehicles from the same dealer(s). But this doesn't mean they walk into their favorite dealership, lie down, and roll over. On the contrary, price—even for them—is an important consideration. Perhaps you think these dealer loyalists are lazy. Could they be members of the so-called idle rich? No, this is not the reason they patronize the same dealer again and again. Perhaps you might speculate that these buyers just like their dealer. Well, affection is not the answer either.

TABLE 4-3
MOTOR VEHICLE ACQUISITION ORIENTATIONS OF MILLIONAIRES

ORIENTATION TOWARD DEALERS:
	Loyalists	Shoppers	TOTALS
VEHICLE TYPE ORIENTATION:	1	2
	% of All Millionaires	% of All Millionaires	% of All
	Who Are:	Who Are:	Millionaires
New Vehicle-Prone	New Vehicle-Prone	New Vehicle-Prone	Who Are:
	Dealer Loyalists = 28.6	Dealer Shoppers = 34.8	New Vehicle-Prone = 63.4
	% of All Loyalists = 62.5	% of All Shoppers = 64.1
	% of All New Vehicle-Prone = 45.1	% of All New Vehicle-Prone = 54.9
	3	4	% of All
Used Vehicle-Prone	% of All Millionaires	% of All Millionaires	Millionaires
	Who Are:	Who Are:	Who Are:
	Used Vehicle-Prone	Used Vehicle-Prone	Used Vehicle-Prone = 36.6
	Dealer Loyalists = 17.1	Shoppers = 19.5
	% of All Loyalists = 37.5	% of All Shoppers = 35.9
	% of All Used Vehicle-Prone = 46.8	% of All Used Vehicle-Prone = 53.2
TOTALS	% of All Millionaires Who Are: Dealer Loyalists = 45.7	% of All Millionaires Who Are: Dealer Shoppers = 54.3	